Objectifs du parcours

Bienvenue au Master Euroculture à Strasbourg ! Euroculture est un Master dont les enseignements sont en anglais, unique, interdisciplinaire et international, orienté sur les questions de l'intégration européenne selon une perspective citoyenne. L'Université de Strasbourg appartient à un consortium de 8 universités européennes et 4 universités non-européennes. Choisissez deux ou trois universités sur les quatre semestres, plongez dans un environnement multiculturel et devenez expert de la gouvernance et de la culture européennes ! Un investissement unique pour votre carrière professionnelle.

Euroculture offers great opportunities if you are interested in understanding—and shaping—today's Europe. Our two-year master's programme is ideal for students who understand that Europe's future will be shaped not only by economics and politics, but also by struggles over identities, values, and heritage. Our MA programme will equip you with the tools to understand the vital interplay between culture and politics in European society. With an interdisciplinary approach that combines courses from at least two leading European universities with an internship and practical training, Euroculture prepares you to make a difference in careers like diplomacy, international business, research, journalism, cultural management, and European administration.

Selected by the European Commission as an Erasmus Mundus Programme of Excellence, Euroculture is a truly international MA programme. The Euroculture programme is a cooperation between eight European and four non-European universities. The Euroculture programme aims to prepare graduates for the increasing number of professions and research areas in which knowledge and understanding of contemporary Europe – its peoples, its processes, its institutions – is necessary.

The main objectives of the programme are:

- To give students a broad understanding of the functioning of European integration and an in-depth knowledge of the aspects of European integration that constitute the specialisms of their chosen universities.
- To teach students the research skills necessary to further their knowledge and carry out exercises of reflection and analysis.
- To equip students with the communication and intercultural skills necessary for working in an international environment
- To introduce students to professionals working in various fields of European integration so as to allow for a transfer of expertise and professional competences.
- To encourage students to construct a network of contacts of their own that will serve as a valuable asset in their professional careers.

Compétences à acquérir

Our interdisciplinary courses offer you a broad and deep training, exploring modern European society through history, political science, law, sociology and cultural and religious studies. We supply you with the skills to see below the surface of contemporary issues.

Our practical, skills based courses, called Eurocompetence modules, equip you with communicative and project management skills. These courses will help you to turn theory into practice and to develop the intercultural skills needed for working in transnational businesses, organisations and networks.

- study issues that are related to European integration and European institutions from multiple perspectives, focusing on the citizen and culture rather than on abstract models and structures.
- learn about approaches and methods from different disciplines including social and cultural studies and international relations.
- study and socialise with people from countries all over the world and from a variety of cultural backgrounds.
- take part in an international summer school—Euroculture's Intensive Programme—with around 100 participants from all partner universities.
- enhance your employability by developing your professional and academic skills and intercultural competences.

Poursuite d'études

Euroculture graduates have built careers jobs in the fields of cultural management, government, research, journalism, policy-making, international business, NGOs, and European institutions. Others have found careers in academia, taking up PhD research in many fields in the humanities and social sciences.

Euroculture prepares its graduates – from all over the world – with a thorough grounding in the historical, religious, linguistic and cultural aspects that play an essential, but often neglected, role in the Europe of today. Our programme recognises that the power of culture, values and identities in modern societies calls for sensitive and well-informed professionals to work as diplomats, managers, administrators, policy makers, journalists and cultural professionals.

Enseignements délocalisés

The MA in Euroculture is a four semester (2 year), 120 ECTS, full-time programme. Students study in at least two universities of the Consortium of 8 European and 4 non-European universities, and are awarded either a double or a joint diploma. As a Euroculture student, you become part of an international network of students, academics, and institutions in Europe and in the Wider World. Every Euroculture student studies at least at two European partner universities: after spending the first semester at the university to which they were originally admitted, students have to go to a different European partner university for the second semester. In the third semester Euroculture students choose either a professional track (work placement) or a research track at any of the 8 European partner universities. European students can also apply for a research track at one of our non-European partner universities.
